Editorial

Welcome to Spring at last!

The great outdoors calls, but here is a query to ensure that the "little grey cells" keep working..

What is the item shown below?

Who was the person named - George Jolly 1909?
What age was he when he died; who were his parents, brothers and sisters; did he marry more than once; how many children did he have? The object has been handed down through the family and originates in Dublin. The owner would love to know the answers to these questions.

If you have similar problems and don't know where to start, why not join the 'Back to Basics' workshops that are starting on Thursday October 26th. The team have worked hard to put this series together to ensure that all participants are given the help they need.

Take advantage of their expertise! See page 2 for more details.

The other exciting news this month is the reinstatement of the Kapiti Irish Special Interest Group (SIG). The group was closed several years ago due to the organiser's poor health, but by popular demand the new Irish SIG is holding its first meeting on October 31st, 1-3pm. If you are interested please let us know. Email IrishSIG@KapitiGen.org

An interesting article by Kathy Callaghan on page 6 explains why Facebook is a useful tool in genealogy research. And check out Lorna's tips on some useful features of Family Search that you may not know about - see page 4.

Tour of the National Library

A group of 11 had another successful tour of the National Library on Sept 28th. Before the tour started we explored the new 'home' for the Treaty of Waitangi. The room housing this is stunning, with beautiful sculptured Rimu walls and ceiling. You can press a button and light up a section of the display.

The tour group was made up of first timers and those that have been many times. Everyone came away learning something new. There is so much to be discovered.

All the basics were covered as to what is available. Some of the lesser known things included the Biography Collection. This is on microfiche and is newspaper clippings of 'random people' (not necessarily famous) up to the 1980's. You may find an ancestor or family member there!

Also on microfiche is the Newspaper Index. This is of notable (sometimes obscure) events such as accidents, fires etc. It goes up to the 1990's so you will not find these in Papers Past. Definitely worth a look.

There is a dedicated computer to Quick Maps, which consists of deposited plans for buildings, searched by address. You can see titles for buildings up until the present day. Just put the address into the search engine!

The photograph collection is definitely worth looking through, as not all the photos in this collection are available online. These photos are in filing cabinets and are searchable by name or geographical area.

If you bring your own lap top, tablet or phone you can access the free Wi Fi and all the online links, some of which are only available when in the building. Download documents straight to your device.

Another tour of the National Library will be organised next year. However, if you go down on your own, the staff are always very willing to help you.

Remember to update your email address!

Vodafone will cease providing email services on 30 November.

By now most of you that are affected will have set up the automatic forward to your new email provider, but so far very few of the 60+ members currently with Vodafone have changed their details with us. Please update your email address as soon as possible to continue receiving emails from us (including the newsletter!)

To change your email address, log into our web pages using the existing email address held with us, and update your profile to your new email address. It's that simple!

Instructions can be found at <http://www.kapitigen.org/2012/07/logging-in/>

Please be aware that with the automatic forward organised by Vodafone many forwarded emails MAY end up in the Spam folder of your new email provider, so check there and train your new email by marking the legit ones as Not Spam.

Scottish alert!

There's so much more to 'Family Search'

Our Overview session on September 21st, focusing on FamilySearch, <http://FamilySearch.org>, attracted a good turnout. It is hard to do justice to such a huge topic in just an hour and a half.

So here are some brief notes:

Registering

Look back at our June 2016 newsletter for notes on how to register. It is on our website under Communications > Newsletters > 2016 > Jun. One change since then, given the intensive digitization programme, is that you can no longer order films from their immense collection for reading at the nearest centre. However, facilities for accessing some of the digital versions are now available at the National Library. See the September 2017 newsletter - Page 6.

Maps

Check out <http://maps.familysearch.org> for wonderful maps of England and Wales that can be filtered in various ways according to jurisdiction (which influences what records may be found where) eg the Poor Law Unions

Can't find your ancestor in the expected parish records? Go to the county concerned in the map and explore the options that pop up - eg list all parishes, list all contiguous counties, search the Family Search Catalogue or the Wiki.

I had a serendipitous discovery when I picked Somerset as a demonstration and searched the catalogue. I popped in my particular parish of interest, Martock, only to discover a digitized, but unindexed, set of Manor Court records. Clicking on the camera icon had us squinting at a set of chicken scratchings from presumably the 1741 recorded as the starting point, from which we quickly jumped to a more modern page (well 1800s is modern!), which was more easily decipherable.

Wiki

Starting to research somewhere new? Don't know what might be available or where?

Try the Wiki for general information, along with links to data in the FamilySearch Catalogue.

The FamilySearch tree

A collaborative "one world tree", - ie should really only contain one profile per person - work on your family, for free, with your "cousins". Very handy for attaching the sources you've examined to the relevant person in the tree so you know you've researched that record/family.

Many records have already had the people in them extracted into the tree, with the sources attached, but you may have to merge up the families as each record will have been extracted in isolation, eg a baptism will have the individual and parent(s), and a sibling will have the same - the parents will need merging to form a unified family, unless someone has already been there, done that. Set those people you are particularly attached to on "Watch" so that you are notified if anyone changes them.

All collaborative trees can have enthusiastic newbies rushing in without supporting evidence eg a merge of two people they think are they same. This can easily be reversed via the Change History link.

Or they may be a new cousin with a wealth of information that you will want to make contact with via the Messages link.

We don't own our ancestors, and I for one prefer to share at least some of my research via such trees - whilst keeping my master copy safely on my computer.

All of the above is just a small, very small, example of some of the reasons to use FamilySearch. Have fun exploring the site.

Facebook and DNA go hand in hand for research!

For my husband Ross' 70th birthday I decided to research his maternal family, the Tyson family from Cumberland, England. It is wonderful that his aunt, Norma Bayly (Tyson) is still alive at 97 and was able to give insight and knowledge that only a living person can do.

I used all the traditional resources, which of course were very helpful. However, there is nothing like visiting historical places and getting information from a 'local'. This was not an option at this time, but we had visited Cumberland ten years ago, visiting graveyards (as we all do on holidays, right?) and getting a feel for this rather isolated part of England.

This project happened to coincide with an email from a DNA match for Ross from a gentleman named Rich in the USA. We quickly established that the closest shared grandparent was their great, great grandfather James TYSON, (1825 – 1925) He was the son of Moses Tyson (1786- 1849).

Rich emailed me this wonderful photo of a shepherd, complete with shepherd crook, dressed in the traditional agricultural smock. Written on the back was:

*'For Bruce 1991, Great Great grandfather Tyson. Believed to have been reproduced from an old tin type, probably by *William Rene Edmund Neal. Possibly taken in the Lake District area near Bootle, Cumberland. Late 1700's is as near as can be traced. His name could be Moses Tyson, of High Kinmont, Corney, but no proof available'.*

*William Rene Edmund NEAL was married to the Eleanor Parker (1886 – 1947), granddaughter of James Tyson.

The writing on the back of the photo was both helpful and confusing! It led me to research tin type photography. The first mention of tin type photography was around 1853, four years after the death of Moses Tyson in 1849. Therefore it is doubtful the shepherd in our photograph was Moses Tyson, but likely to be his son James Tyson.

I then researched agricultural smocks, which I discovered were in use during the 1700's to the late 1800's. They went out of fashion in the late 1800's with the introduction of agricultural mechanical equipment, as the smock would get caught in the farm machinery. This reinforced that the person in the photo could not be Moses, but was likely to be his son James Tyson.

My next step was to 'go local' via the Cumbria Family History Society Facebook page, seeking any insight about the photo. This proved to be very effective. Within a few hours, information came flooding in! I received photos of where Moses Tyson was living in the 1841 Census (The Parsonage, Corney) and other useful information.

Encouraged by this response I posted on the Bootle Cumbria Memories Facebook page, seeking information regarding the location of Fell Gate in Bootle, where Margaret Agnes TYSON , the great grandmother of our DNA contact in the USA came from. Within minutes I had photographs of Fell Gate as it is today and comments on the history of the area.

Facebook is a very useful resource, especially for those who live outside an area. Almost all the family history Facebook pages are 'closed'. That means you request to join. Don't be put off by this. It is to prevent the page being clogged by spam.

Kapiti Genealogy has a Facebook page. The way it is currently set up enables interaction and goes way beyond just another notice board. Check it out.
